So many nevers:

She'll never go completely gray;

She'll never get old;

Never retire;

Never have grandchildren.

She'll never meet her son's girlfriend;

Never see him graduate;

Never see him married.

She'll never watch her boys

Struggle with adulthood;

Never know the pride

Of each precious win.

She'll never know arthritis;

Never know dementia;

Never get diabetes;

Never fear cancer.

She'll never know the pain

Of this pernicious grief:

She'll never see

One of her children

Die.
